Every year the percentage of students of colleges and different schools in the harvest fields here increases. In some parts of the state the farmers depended largely on this class of harvesters this year, and found them good workmen. This proves, too, that there are a good class of young men in the colleges.

The Topeka papers each year run a standing announcement of fair dates in Kansas. Most of the counties are represented in that list, but each year Ford county is missing from the list. The Dodge City Fair and Reunion is one of the great meetings of the state. Why has the date of it never appeared in the lists carried by the Topeka papers.

NO SPECIAL EXAMINATIONS.

State Superintendent Instructs County Superintendents to Avoid Holding Special Examinations.

State Superintendent Fairchild has ruled that county superintendents shall refuse to hold special examinations, unless the scarcity of teachers in the county make such action necessary. In his letter to the county superintendents he says:

"Special county teachers' examinations held after the regular examination in counties in which there is a shortage are beginning to be looked upon with some disfavor. Each year some counties of the state must depend upon other counties for their supply of teachers and in those counties they want to know that the teachers they are securing from abroad have passed an examination up to the standard of the regular teachers' examination. The danger is that a lower standard of grading may be used at the special examination after the schools of the county have been filled. The very few who do not have an opportunity to take the regular examination, or who are accumulating grades toward a professional certificate, usually can find it convenient to take the regular examination in a neighboring county. "As the plan of permitting special examinations to be held was intended originally for counties where there is a shortage of teachers, it is expected that county superintendents will in no case request a permit for a special examination, unless there is evidence of a shortage of teachers in the county."
